

It is an outrage that one corporation would have so much ownership of the media. We need regulation to control these blatant acts of manipulation and stimulate competition. When you say that "entering an official comment" is the only way the FCC can determine how it should act tells me the system is flawed. Most citizens don't know how or have time to input their comments. Devise another system, overhaul the existing system or get the message to the people how to enter their comments.

This last stunt really just sickens me.
